"Twins"...?

OR is there a more unusual connection between these two women who keep finding themselves in the middle of mayhem — both in the U.S. and abroad?

Sophisticated Gee, born of privilege, a socialite philanthropist in Boston, and Karen, a sporty, down-to-earth private detective. . . yet inhabiting the same body. And in love with the same man (the family's hunky private pilot).

This tongue-in-cheek romp follows these "two" on their multi-continent adventures as they track down killers, confront para-military groups, and end up in the crosshairs of an international drug cartel — changing locations and jetting hither and yon as quickly as they change a shade of lipstick. Yet they also manage to tackle a range of today's most pressing issues including government corruption, gun control, money laundering, hurricane relief, and more.

WELCOME to this fast-paced, imaginative, and idealized reality where the world's ills are often tidied up in lightning quick fashion, providing some utopian escapism for anyone who enjoys a mystery, inside a puzzle, inside a riddle as there's also a classic whodunit enfolded herein—with yet another startling twist at this tale's unorthodox conclusion. . .

Author Thomas E. Cochrane is a noted N. California geologist and author of two nonfiction titles in his area of seasoned expertise: Shaping the Sonoma-Mendocino Coast: Exploring the Coastal Geology of Northern California, and most recently Tornados, Rattlesnakes & Oil—A Wildcatter's Memories of Hunting for "Black Gold." Cochrane is also a popular regional guest speaker in Sonoma County where he's made his home for several decades. Entwined is his first foray into fiction.
